European Innovation Academy

SUNY Cortland offers this course in partnership with the European Innovation Academy (EIA), a three-week, intensive entrepreneurship "boot camp" where students work in multidisciplinary, international teams to take their business idea from the conceptual stage to the market place. Offered fully online in the Summer 2021 session, each student will receive six internship credits upon successful completion of the program.

The EIA partners with several renowned global companies, such as Google, Santander, IBM, and Daimler, with many smaller companies and startups who present either as participating teams, lecturers, or mentors. Additionally, input flows from real companies allowing participants to make real life-application of their coursework. Thus the challenge unfolds in a learning environment that corresponds to current and future workplace requirements, including cross-functional and virtual teams with crowdsourced work tasks, a multicultural work force, and extremely demanding organization, planning, and communication skills.

This program is advised by Drs. Kathleen Burke and Brian Ward, of the Economics Department.
