

Why minor in English?

- You need flexibility. We offer four minors that allow you to design your own course of study. Choose from courses such as YA Lit, Science Fiction and Fantasy, LGBTQ Literature, Native American Literature, Creative Writing, Professional Writing, and Film Analysis.
- You love a good discussion. In small classes that encourage collaboration and conversation, you will get to know your professors and peers on a first-name basis. You will debate important questions about meaning, representation, identity, culture, and expression.
- You see connections across disciplines. Whether your major is psychology or criminology, biology or sociology, business economics or exercise science, you will be encouraged to discover and pursue connections between your major and minor.
- You crave creative and intellectual community. Workshop writing with the Cortland Writers' Association. Meet contemporary authors through the Distinguished Voices in Literature Series. Talk teaching in the English Education Club. Present research at conferences with the English Honors Society. Travel to England with our faculty.
- You want a job. Employers are hungry for candidates with expertise in writing, editing, and interpretation. Complement your major by developing skills in writing and textual analysis. You will read and write everything from essays and poems to websites and short films.

Only six courses (18 credits).

Choose from one of four minors.

Literature / Professional Writing / Literature + Writing / Language + Literature

For more info, click here: <https://www2.cortland.edu/departments/english/majors-minors.dot> or email us at EnglishDept@cortland.edu

Website: <https://www2.cortland.edu/departments/english/index.dot>

Email: EnglishDept@cortland.edu

Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/SUNYCortlandEnglish/>

Phone: 607-753-4307

Office: Old Main 112

